Management	ivianagement		Sector Overview 003, University and College Counselling Services (BACP) says:		British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (BACP) recommendations.
			In making decisions as to how long to retain client records, services should take account of the sometimes conflicting considerations listed below: • the Data Protection Act, which states that sensitive data should not be kept for longer than is necessary • the policy of Durham University • the ability of the service to store confidential records safely and securely over time • the likelihood that a client's records could be needed in the future, for example, for a criminal case or civil suit, in a claim for compensation, or for an internal university or college procedure such as an academic appeal or formal complaint. The length of time needed to retain records in such scenarios is extremely difficult to predict.		The BACP Ethical Framework 2018 does not mandate the keeping of records but advises "keeping accurate and appropriate records", you should balance this against the requirements of data protection legislation which state that personal information should be kept no longer than necessary. Counselling files contain Sensitive Information and are confidential.
			Each service will need to decide a realistic timescale that can be accommodate these considerations and what best practice would be in their context. An alternative position would be to shred all session notes, keeping minimal factual information for a limited amount of time. What is important is that a service has a stated policy on the length of time notes are retained, that clients are aware of it, and that this policy is adhered to.
